Why This Matters

Animal shelters across the country continue to face overwhelming intake numbers. High-volume spay and neuter remains one of the most effective and scalable strategies for preventing animals from entering shelters in the first place. Clinics performing the highest surgical volumes are making the greatest measurable impact, reducing future overcrowding, decreasing euthanasia, protecting community animals, and expanding access to affordable veterinary care.

"These Top 10 nominees represent the highest level of impact in our entire network," said Gina Clemmer , Executive Director of Clinic HQ. "Their work prevents tens of thousands of unwanted litters, supports families who rely on accessible care, and demonstrates what's possible when efficiency and compassion come together. Their dedication truly moves the needle for animal welfare nationwide."
